“The humanities aren’t just there to be consumed... We need them like medicine. They help us live.” – Barack Obama

We are looking for a committed Head of Humanities to lead our passionate and dedicated team of subject experts so all of our pupils get the best possible experiences of these vital subjects.

Why choose to be a curriculum leader at Dame Elizabeth?

We want the best for every child, regardless of who they are. We only employ teachers who share this core value.

We insist on pupils having good manners and showing respect to each other and their teachers.

We have a very inclusive ethos, where everyone is respected, whatever their gender, race and sexual orientation. Teachers are visible role models and we do not tolerate discrimination of any kind.

We want the best for every teacher, whatever the stage of their careers, with a wide range of professional development opportunities.

We reward hard work. How many years you have been in the teaching profession does not determine which year groups you get to teach and how quickly you progress to the next stage of your career.

We have a lot of expertise at tackling teacher workload so we don’t ask teachers to do anything to tick a box. We strip away anything which does not have an impact on pupils’ learning.

If you would like to know more about this specific role then have a read of the job description or email Headteacher David Lowbridge-Ellis dlowbridgeellis@decschool.co.uk directly. He will be happy to answer any questions or arrange a tour.
